Chapter 26: End-of-life care Flashcards | Quizlet The goal of grieving is NOT to get over it, as much of society encourages, but to figure out how to go on living without the loved one actively present in one's life. Persons grieve in different ways and over different periods of time. Nurses should not encourage those grieving to "get over it", but to go through the grieving process to find meaning and adjustment to the loved one's death.
