A very rich literature on cluster analysis has developed over the past three decades. Many conventional clustering algorithms have been adapted or directly applied to gene expres-sion data, and ... clustering - How to cluster survey data? - Cross Validated How to cluster survey data? Ask Question 3. 5 $\begingroup$ I have designed a rather long (250 Qn) survey designed to uncover user clusters. The questions are such that the pattern of answering should elicit user clusters, but I am having trouble uncovering these with my analyses to date. For example, a typical Qn might be: 'Are you more of a dog or cat person?' Or, 'Chocolate or vanilla?' etc ... Panel data analysis: a survey on model-based clustering of ... Abstract. Clustering is a widely used statistical tool to determine subsets in a given data set. Frequently used clustering methods are mostly based on distance measures and cannot easily be extended to cluster time series within a panel or a longitudinal data set. Cluster Analysis - norusis.com In cluster analysis, you don't know who or what belongs in which group. You often don't even know the number of groups.
