Note: Tableau Desktop will show one marks card for each copy of container called: Sum(Container) and Sum(Container) (2). This step is necessary because if only one copy of [Container] is used to create each column, then the headers will be on the bottom of the view. Breaking BI: Formatting Individual Columns in Tableau ... Formatting Individual Columns in Tableau (Dual-Axis Crosstabs) Today, we will look at a special type of graph in Tableau, the "Dual-Axis Crosstab." The inspiration for this method comes from Conditional Formatting , which I know was at least partly developed by Jonathan Drummey. Creating Conditional Labels | Tableau Software Using calculated fields, you can create conditional data labels based on a custom field that includes only the values of interest. This step shows how to create a conditional label that appears on a mark only when a region's sales for a day are greater than $60,000. Questions from Tableau Training: Colouring Specific ... Formatting options do not allow you to choose a specific column or row in the crosstab, so we would use a calculation in this case. As we would like to colour the Region dimension, we should specify the dimension within the calculation. Tableau: Advanced Conditional Formatting Here's a nice tip on using a simple calculation to extend your ability to format, say, text columns differently, something you can't do with Measure Names and Values. Tableau Hack: How to Conditionally Format Individual Rows This is just one example of conditional formatting in Tableau, but you can format the rows with any of the options available to you on the Marks Cards. For example, one row could be just text, while the other rows could be circles. Some rows can have different shapes. You could have different sized marks to highlight a key finding. The list goes on and on... Tableau - Conditional Formatting 70+ channels, more of your favorite shows, & unlimited DVR storage space all in one great price.
